THE MALCOLM K. DOUGLAS
SUMMER INTERNSHIP PROGRAM
Connecting students to success

“You could tell he gained confidence in his skills...

By the end of the summer, Jacob was helping to teach others about props and scenery.”

— TRAVIS KENDRICK, MILL MOUNTAIN THEATRE

“My internship at Novozymes Biologicals gave me the opportunity to help with real experiments and data collection, and I got to meet scientists and
discuss their work.”

— ANN ASHLEY DANIEL '19

Our region is on the rise.

In recent years, the strength of our region's infrastructure and economic development programs, coupled with our enduring appeal to outdoor enthusiasts and families, have created an ideal landing, and launching pad, for industry and business. North Cross students — who have spent their high-school years developing a global perspective and honing their critical thinking skills — are poised to be the next generation of business and industry leaders and innovators.

Veteran North Cross teacher, Malcolm Douglas established the North Cross School Internship Program to not only build students experiences in the 'real world,' but to entice them to return to these hometown opportunities after college. The internship program aims to bring the enthusiasm and acumen of our students to the fields which are shaping a new chapter for Roanoke and our region. Together, with business and industry, we are working to make our region stronger and helping to develop our future leaders.

Partnerships.

North Cross School partners with non-profit groups, business, the arts, public service, real estate, education and science. These are just a few of the sectors in which our North Cross students have and will continue to share their dedication and hard work. In return, students gain useful work experience and connections that will help them shape their own career goals and afford them a competitive edge in the college admission process. Forbes magazine suggests that internships benefit both the student and the employer and that interning students are not unskilled; rather, they bring value to an organization through the opportunity to train students who may one day be employees.¹

Students.

The North Cross School Malcolm K. Douglas Summer Internship Program is designed to provide rising ninth-through twelfth-grade students an opportunity to enhance their educational experience and explore career possibilities. It provides exposure for some of the school's most mature students to regional businesses, educational and medical institutions, cultural programs, and community service organizations.

If a student has a particular interest or skill not represented in the current offerings, we encourage them to create opportunities for themselves within their field of interest, either by making contact on their own, or networking with alumni, and our Program Director is always willing to facilitate these connections. In the end, the aim is to foster a student's independence and capabilities in the working world.

“The amount of knowledge about technical theatre I gained this summer is far beyond anything I have learned in any class and the staff truly made me feel welcome and valued.”
